

NATURE | CONSERVATION
CONSERVANCY | DE LA NATURE
CANADA

Canada is home to more than 800 native bee species, and most of these bees are solitary. They do not live in hives, instead they live in the ground or in hollow stems. None of them make honey, and many of them do not sting. In fact, native bees come in a rainbow of colours, including blue and green!

Bees like the bumble bee are native to Canada, while non-native bees, like the honey bee, were introduced from other countries.