

Photo by Shutterstock.com/Anton MirMar

Northern pintail

The longest non-stop flight ever recorded for a northern pintail was 2,897 kilometres.

Photo by Shutterstock.com/Agami Photo Agency

Franklin's gull

80 per cent of the global population of Franklin's gull breeds in Canada's Prairie provinces.

Photo by Shutterstock.com/Michael Armentrout

Whooping crane

This species has made a comeback since the 1940s when there were only 21–22 birds remaining. Today, close to 600 whooping cranes exist in the wild and in captivity.

YOUR MIGRATING BIRD IDENTIFICATION GUIDE

Use these silhouettes to identify birds overhead, as they journey along their migration paths through your region this spring.

Whooping crane

Spot it on
NCC's Nebo property
in Saskatchewan

Franklin's gull

Spot it on
NCC's Bunchberry Meadows
property in Alberta

Northern pintail

Spot it on
NCC's Old Man on His Back
Prairie and Heritage
Conservation Area property
in Saskatchewan